

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

AUG 23 1951

Allen W. Dulles of New York City was today named Deputy Director of Central Intelligence to succeed William H. Jackson, of Princeton, New Jersey, who resigned that post due to the pressure of private business. Mr. Jackson will continue with CIA as special assistant to the director on a part-time basis. He has been Deputy Director since October 1950.

Both Dulles and Jackson were members of the three-man board that in January 1949 prepared for the National Security Council a report on the national intelligence system including a review of the Central Intelligence Agency.

A one-time career diplomat, New York attorney, and wartime chief of the Office of Strategic Services in Switzerland, Mr. Dulles joined Central Intelligence in November 1950 as Deputy Director for Plans. He will be succeeded in his post by Frank G. Wisner of Washington, wartime naval intelligence and OSS officer, and a CIA official since 1948.

ALLEN W. DULLES

Chief of the Swiss-based OSS mission which during World War II helped negotiate the German surrender in Italy, Mr. Dulles was born in Watertown, New York in 1893. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1914, in 1916 was awarded his M. A. and in 1926 received a law degree from George Washington University.

After teaching English for one year in Allahabad, India, Mr. Dulles joined the diplomatic service in 1916. He served in Vienna and then in Berne before being appointed to the American Commission to negotiate the peace treaty after World War I. Following a brief tour of duty in Berlin, Mr. Dulles was assigned to the Department of State in Washington and in 1920 to the American mission to Constantinople. Upon his return to the United States in 1922, he was named chief of the division of Near Eastern Affairs of the Department of State. As U. S. delegate to the International Conference on Arms Traffic, Mr. Dulles went to Geneva in 1925 and again in 1926 as a member of the American delegation to the Preparatory Disarmament Commission.

In 1926 he resigned from the foreign service to join the law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell in New York city. Thereafter he served as legal advisor to the American delegation at the Three-Power Naval Conference in Geneva in 1927 and as legal advisor to the American delegation at the general Disarmament Conferences in 1932 and 1933.

He is the author of two books, "Can America Stay Neutral?" with Hamilton Fish Armstrong in 1939, and "Germany's Underground" in 1947. In 1945, he was elected president of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Mr. Dulles is married to the former Clover Todd, has three children including a son in the Marine Corps, and makes his home in New York city.

He is the brother of John Foster Dulles, special representative of the President for the Japanese peace treaty.
